Argh!

Huh. I could've sworn I heard some roughhousing.

Maybe one of these paintings is haunted?

Ms. Butterfly, whatever it is you wish to find, I will help you find it.

Portrait of the Twins? All these paintings should've been lost in the "Storm" ...

I see ... These are forgeries, yes?

Merely decorations for the auction. As for the club's true goal ...

According to Lorentz Butterfly, the Manus are smuggling some kind of mineral pigment out of Mexico.

Manus Vindictae, mineral pigment ... the resurrection ritual.

No one knows the era better than its natives.

You're Ms. Ramona, the exorcist who fixes crime scenes?!

I've found a soon-to-be victim—and the thread linking every murder.

This emblem ... The Turquoise Serpent Club.

The most notorious arcanist gang in the city.

This drama will draw its curtain on the second night of the Day of the Dead, when the city's residents welcome back their faithful departed.

They believe death is only part of the cycle of life.

The killer's trying to lead the victims' spirits somewhere. But where?

Thank you ... for showing me those beautiful memories.

But you have to understand, nothing lasts forever.

When the killer strikes and the audience screams, I'll be sitting in the best seat in the house.

I've got you now.

Distinguished "Pipiltin," my ancient noble guests!
Welcome to the Turquoise Serpent Club!

To whom shall this extraordinary arcanist artwork go this evening?

Why are you all looking at me? What on earth is going on here ...?!

S-Someone help me! Please!
