Space ...

Is it really beyond our reach?

We can still save this project!

All we need to do is send a monitor into space to collect data as the "Storm" arrives.

Into space?

So you mean you want me to become ... an astronaut?

Are you ever going to tell her the real consequences of the "Storm"?

If this works out—

Then I guarantee you'll arrive home safe and sound.

You really expect me to sign this application, knowing it means you're all going to die?

Ms. Hissabeth ... I know the "Storm" isn't just some regular natural disaster ...

It's not just an old building or some candy in a store that will be taken away—

It's the place I grew up and all the people I love.

If we determine the "Storm" will inevitably swallow up the stars, then wouldn't it all be pointless?

But if something were to happen, you would be the one to survive. I need you to keep our records.

We believe Voyager 1 will continue to explore the galaxy on and on ...

Traveling into the depths of the universe, carrying with it humanity's spirit of exploration, it is likely to persist longer than life on earth ...

In our short lives, we come up with a lot of questions about the world.

And we have to find the answers for ourselves.

We get to choose what meaning we give to our lives.

How beautiful ...

The stars are.
