COL-100718

Thirty-seven: First is the circle, second is the square.

Vertin: 37? Is that you?

The little girl does not seem to be listening; she's completely absorbed in building her castle.

Thirty-seven: Put the triangle on the triangle, and the rectangle on the rectangle.

Thirty-seven: Perfect! As things should be!

77: The "Emanation" ... Disorder and chaos ...

77: This can't be. This isn't right!

77: How ugly, how inelegant! How could this be the revelation from the patterns of the transcendental Law above? How could such a terrible answer fall on my ears?!

77: I can't tell the others about this. There must be a mistake! I need proof. I have to go out there.

Vertin: Uhm!

Arcana: Vertin. My child.

Arcana: Are you here to partake in sand play, as well? No matter how oft we rearrange them, the sight of them never grows stale.

Arcana: Alas.

Arcana: I shall destroy it.

Vertin: ...!!!

Thirty-seven: Vertin? Are you awake?

Consciousness is snapped back to reality.

The surroundings have reverted to the rocky walls, still enclosed within the cave.

37 stands with her head tilted, looking curious.

Thirty-seven: I, I think I had a terrible dream.

Vertin: What did you dream?

Thirty-seven: Regulus claimed 6's throne and declared this the rock 'n' roll empire of irrational numbers. She took out a jar of coffee beans and stuffed one into my mouth.

37 shakes her head hard, as if trying to rid her mind of the horrific scene.

Thirty-seven: I'm relieved that I woke up in time. And you as well!

Thirty-seven: Let's go, Vertin! We need to tell everyone the numbers.

She chirps, her face lighting up with delight, finally free from the long nightmare.

A beam of daylight appears before them.

The lengthy trial has finally come to an end.

Thirty-seven: Do you hear that? So many people out there!

Thirty-seven: Must be Sophia here to pick me up! I told her she can wait for me outside.

Thirty-seven: Sophia!

The girl runs happily towards the light.

Like a young swallow swooping out of sight.

Vertin: Wait, 37!

Got to catch up.

Got to leave this place at once.

Must share the findings here with the others.

Finally, the light of day comes into view.

A gust of wind suddenly rushes by, sending pebbles scattering across the ground.

The all too familiar stench of sulfur fills the air.

It is unmistakably the smoke of war.

Vertin: ...

Vertin: What?
