Apocalypsis cum figuris

Contents

[English text unavailable] 2

[English text unavailable]

COL-800003

Regulus: Here we go. One, two, mic check ... Let's rock it, baby! Shake your body and scream your lungs out! Whew ... Now that's what I call a record!

Regulus: Everybody listening? This cool-looking record player belongs to this pirate now, mates! Call it backpay for me playing the goody-two-shoes lately!

Regulus: And for whoever ends up with this record. Alright, Vertin, I know you're probably feeling all kinds of ways right now ... But hey, we're still breathing, rock's still alive—that's what matters! Chin up!

Ulrich: Regulus, why are you holding that prototype? That's Laplace's property—put it back in the warehouse immediately.

Ulrich: Are you recording this? Is it meant for the Timekeeper?

Ulrich: coughs Timekeeper, the Antarctic expedition has helped us confirm several hypotheses. You may need time to process these findings, but overall we've made excellent progress. I look forward to more collaborations in the future.

Ulrich: And Regulus, go file your equipment request form right now. Next time, ask first.

Nautika: C-could you hold the microphone a little higher? Yes—and higher, please! Perfect, thank you!

Nautika: Vertin, are you listening? Since we're expedition teammates now, l-let me know next time you're off on an adventure. I'll give you a ride!

Sonetto: Communicating with you through this medium has given me more time to think about what I want to say. I think I'm quite fond of this method, Timekeeper.

Sonetto: Anyway, Timekeeper, if we've foiled Manus Vindictae's plot this time, I believe we can defeat Arcana again—and find Ms. Urd.

Sonetto: So I hope you'll allow yourself to relax and savor this victory.

???: Wait a moment. Is Vertin going to listen to this? May I add something?

???: Don't be alarmed. I'm not your enemy—for now. I've received no such orders.

???: ...Vertin, sometimes I wonder—do you truly believe it's better to force someone to live than to let them die for a cause? Perhaps we'll find the answer through our future cooperation ... No, forget I said that. I hope you won't have to see me again.