One Day

Merel: Timekeeper?

Hallway, St. Pavlov Foundation

Vertin: Hm? You are ...?

Merel: I'm Merel. We met before during the Don River campaign. I was also part of the Antarctica operation.

Vertin: Well, then it's good to see you again.

Merel: I heard about what happened there. I wish we could have done more to help you.

Vertin: It was a difficult time for all of us.

Merel: It was, but it didn't make me feel any less useless at the time. But now I've been reassigned to the SPDM. I'll be assisting Matilda.

Vertin: Is there something I can help you with, Merel?

Merel: I, oh, no. I just ... I prepared some gifts before leaving.

Merel: Anyway, these are for you. Best of luck with your work!

Vertin: Thank you, Merel. You as well.

Merel: I'll leave you to it, then. Goodbye!

Vertin: This is ... But why?

She tilts her head, puzzled, and walks away.

Merel: Vertin must think I'm so odd. If only I'd tried a little harder, it wouldn't have been so awkward.

Merel: Thank you, Vertin, for everything you've done for us through the "Storm."
