Sonetto: Nautika, watch out for the black mucus!

Nautika: Hold on, team!

Nautika spreads her wings, charging headfirst into a storm of black arrows.

Sonetto: ...!

At the last possible moment, Nautika folds her wings and slips into the narrow gap between the flood and piercing arrows.

Nautika: Ugh! Is everyone okay?

Sonetto: You're burned! Let me take care of that.

Nautika: I'm fine, really, I am! Just hold onto me!

Vertin: You're injured, Nautika. We can't dodge these attacks forever.

Nautika: You're right.

Nautika: Then, tell me, Vertin. Tell me what to do.

Nautika: I'm still not used to this body. I need your guidance.

Sonetto: Just give the word, Timekeeper.

Vertin: We'll make it through this, together.

Wings spread open again toward the sky, while her friends hold their ground below.

Animus: All this writhing and squirming—it is utterly in vain!

Animus: The "Flood" shall summon the creatures of the Blank Era.

Her words dig deep into the bone.

Animus: And your elimination, along with those pitiful beings sneaking atop the sanctuary, shall serve as its foundation!

Sonetto: They ... Timekeeper, Mr. Ulrich might be in danger!

Vertin: Don't act in haste, Sonetto.

Vertin: We'll do what we can from down here. Keep Animus engaged. Draw her attention away from Mr. Ulrich.

Vertin: And if possible, keep an eye out for Dr. Dores.

Sonetto: Understood.

Nautika: Vertin! The water just keeps getting higher. I'm running out of space to fly in.

Vertin: You're right. We need to make more space.

Vertin: Can you break through these walls?

Nautika: B-Break the walls?

Vertin: Yes, just like you did earlier when you kicked those rocks.

Ahead looms the grotesque deity, her form tethered to the sanctuary by endless pulsing black veins.

Vertin: The entire sanctuary is feeding power to Arcana.

Vertin: If we can break these walls, we may be able to slow down her recovery. We can also use the falling debris to attack the believers below, and create more space for us to stay above the "Flood."

Nautika: Okay. I'll give it my all.
